For most women reeling from the trauma of sexual betrayal, one concern tends to rise above the rest: How can I protect and heal my children from the impact of what's happening? The good news is, you're not alone in asking that question. The better news is, we'll help you find answers!

SATURDAY, APRIL 14TH 2018
3:00–6:00 PM (EST)

"How can I
PROTECT & HEAL my children?"

3-HOUR ONLINE WORKSHOP
for women who are living with, separated or divorced from a sex addict partner or spouse.

YOUR chance to ask questions about YOUR OWN family dynamics AND learn from questions asked by women in similar situations!

COST: $80 Includes workshop prep materials, journaling questions and resource list. Limited scholarship assistance available. If you need it, please ask!

QUESTIONS COMMONLY ASKED by women in this workshop:

- What if my kids are exposed to porn while they're with my husband or ex-husband? Can I prevent this from happening in the first place?
- My children are misbehaving in ways they didn't before I discovered my husband's addiction. Are those two things related? And if so, how do I deal with that?
- As a mother, I know what my kids need to heal from this family trauma. The problem is, my partner disagrees with me—which has resulted in even more conflict. How can I convince him—or what if I can't?
- Are my requests on this topic reasonable, or am I overreacting? Are my expectations realistic? What boundaries are appropriate under these circumstances?
- Should my kids be in therapy? If so, how do I choose the right therapist? I can't afford specialized help for my family. Is any family counseling better than none at all?
- My partner blames me for our conflict, separation and/or divorce—because I'm the one who finally set boundaries to say, "enough is enough." Now, he's telling the kids that I'm the reason our family isn't living together in happiness and harmony. How do I deal with that?
- Though my husband is no longer acting out sexually, his attitudes toward me are still very abusive. How can I protect my children from internalizing this example of marriage and family?
- I hate that my kids have been hurt by their father's actions and my responses to it. How can help them heal from this family trauma?

PARTICIPATION AGREEMENT / DISCLAIMER

AS A CLIENT / WORKSHOP PARTICIPANT, I AGREE TO THE FOLLOWING:

- I will fulfill the amount and terms of payment as indicated in the workshop promotional materials. I understand that my payment is non-refundable, and that payments must be made via no later than Thursday, April 13th, 2018. (To make your payment, choose “send money” to gaelynrae@womeneverafter.com, or register online at btr.org). Workshop access link will be provided to registrants on Thursday, April 13, 2018. Thank you!
- I understand that Gaelyn Rae Emerson is presenting this workshop in her capacity as an APSATS Certified Partner Coach and is NOT qualified to diagnose or treat medical or psychological conditions. (Note: If you experience medical or psychological issues, now or in the future, it is critical that you promptly seek appropriate professional care.) I also understand that Dr. Jill Manning is co-presenting this session in her capacity as a consulting colleague. Though Dr. Manning is a licensed marriage and family therapist, she will NOT be providing clinical care nor therapeutic treatment during this workshop.
- I understand that this coaching workshop does NOT replace my need for solid, state-dependent and case-specific legal advice. I understand that it is my responsibility to consult with my own advisors, including a family law attorney if necessary, regarding issues that relate to any separation, divorce or parenting time-arrangements.
- I understand the nature of coaching, including the imperative value of making my own personal choices. I acknowledge that I alone am responsible for myself; this includes any actions I take or don't take as a result of our coaching relationship. I hold both Gaelyn Rae Emerson, Dr. Jill Manning and all related entities harmless from all legal action relating to this coaching workshop, its services and any recommended resources.
- I understand that parts of this workshop may be recorded (audio only), for the benefit of other women who are facing similar challenges. By choosing to speak interactively during the workshop, I thereby grant my permission to be recorded, at the mutual discretion of both coaches. In the interest of protecting my privacy, I acknowledge my right to use a non-identifying name during the workshop itself. I also understand that I may submit my comments and questions via email to gaelynrae@womeneverafter.com (before the workshop) or using the Zoom chat function (during the workshop); questions submitted by email or chat will be presented anonymously during the workshop.
- I understand that some workshop participants may be mandatory reporters, legally required to inform authorities about any knowledge or suspicion of child sexual abuse. Due to this fact, I agree to refrain from mentioning any PAST -or- PRESENT use of child pornography or child sexual abuse (by my children's father or any other individual) DURING the workshop itself. NOTE from Coach Gaelyn: With this request, I recognize that we're asking you to avoid addressing a concern that IS highly relevant to the topic of our workshop—and I'm genuinely sorry about that! If you're unclear about this request, or wish to discuss your concerns with an appropriate professional, please contact Gaelyn directly for more info.
